

CURRY, ALASKA

AREA 1 – The Valley

Head north on the flats between the railroad tracks and the base of Curry Ridge. Skiing is easy in the glades. The distance from the train to the northern limit is approximately 4 miles.

AREA 2 – Quarry Road

Climb the quarry road (or the original cat track) to the top of the first bench below the quarry. The road climbs 500 feet over one mile and has great views of the valley to the north. Take the road back down or ski the glades on good snow years.

AREA 3 – The Quarry

Continue up the quarry road to the next bench above the quarry. The road climbs another 400 feet over one mile and has great views of the surrounding ridge lines. Stay out of the quarry pit and away from the cliff walls. The road is significantly steeper as you pass the quarry. The glades between benches can make for nice skiing, but be sure to stop before you reach the cliffs above the railroad tracks.

AREA 4 – The Tower

Continue the final climb up the quarry road to the communications tower. This last push is another 400 feet over half a mile and has views Denali. The glades on all sides can make for nice skiing, but be sure to stop before you reach the cliffs above the railroad tracks.

HAZARD - Deadhorse Canyon

Stay out of this area (from above and below). The canyon is narrow and the walls are steep and prone to avalanche and rock fall.

HAZARD – Quarry

Stay out of this area (from above and below). The walls are steep and equipment inside may be hazardous.

HAZARD – Train Tracks

Stay a minimum of 20 feet from tracks (100 feet preferred). Do not cross the tracks. These lines are active and trains cannot stop.
